He was in the war of 1812. was in Dartmoor prison three months, also taken prisoner again just as the war closed. He died at Manila on shipboard. His papers were all lost and his family never learned just how he died. He had a remarkable dog always with him, and after his death, he jumped overboard. Helen Louise Girdler of Los Angeles has his picture. He is said to have all double teeth. See page 166 for more notes.

Capt John Road Russell. enlisted in Capt. Glover's regiment as private in 1775. and was with it in its subsequent career; rowing the army across the East River in its retreat from Battle Hill in Greenwood, having general charge of the evacuation of New York. & holding at bay the British army at Pelham neck, which says Marsh "should make the name of that old man immortal."

Mr. Russell. was also with his regiment at the crossing of the Delaware when response to Washington's call for volunteers. the men of "Marblehead & Marblehead alone said Gen. Knox, an eye witness, stood forth to lead the army along the perilous path of unfading glory at Trenton. Mr. Russell. was also with Glover's Regt. when they led the brilliant charge under Arnold at Saratoga. & when they conveyed the captured army of Burgoyne through Mass.

After the war he was in the foreign merchant service as Capt. Toward the commencement of this century when middle names came in use, he took that of Roads to distinguish himself from his father who was also Capt.

While in Paris he had his portrait painted on porcelain, an excellent picture of his noble face, now in possession of his only surviving child Mrs. Lyons. Probably the only portrait in exis-stance of one of Glover's men. The ^{statue} ~~statue~~ of John Roads Russell. is shown on a statue on Trenton battle field N.Y. to represent the revolutionary soldier, on monument.

From John Russell Kemble.

Capt. W^m Russell was Lieut. in Glover's 5th Regt. called by Washington, the "Marine Regt"

He was a sufferer from paralysis some time before his death. He lived on the site of the Grand Bank, which he sold in to the bank in 1831.

There are no stones in M-h-d. graveyard to mark the graves of W^m Russell or his brother Samuel. The absence of them is not strange to us, who know former customs there of reburial in old graves & the destruction of such monuments within the last 25. years. In 1874. there were on the old burial hill. 12. headstones of the earlier Russells, now there is left only the small half sunken one of their family slave.
