Nine Men’s Morris

This was a popular game during the Colonial era and is a bit like checkers and tic-tac-toe!

How to Play
1. Determine who will place their piece first (a good round of rock, paper, scissors can determine this).
2. Place your game pieces on open spaces. Goal is to place three of your pieces in a row (vertical or horizontal line), which creates a “mill” and allows you to remove a piece of your opponents (not from any of their mills if you can avoid it).
3. Once all the pieces are on the board (apart from the ones already removed), you take turns moving your pieces to open spots (along the lines) to create more mills.
4. A player can "break" a mill by moving one of his pieces out of an existing mill, then moving it back to form the same mill a second time (or any number of times), each time removing one of his opponent's men.
5. When a player is reduced to three pieces, there is no longer a limitation on that player of moving to only adjacent points: The player's men may "fly" from any point to any vacant point.

Pieces
Cut out each of the pieces for playing. One person will be J.O.J. Frost, the other Jeremiah Lee!
